

Please join CfJJ in urging the Legislature to pass Senate Bill No. 940 to mandate the collection of basic statistical juvenile justice data.

THE PROBLEM

Massachusetts fails to collect the basic statistical data it needs to understand how its juvenile justice system is operating. As a result, it is blindly funding a system without the metrics to assess either its fairness or effectiveness.

Here, for example, are some questions for which we should have answers – but don't:

- ◆ How many youth are arrested each year? (Many police departments do not collect or report this data.)
- ◆ What types of crimes are youth committing? (There is no data about what types of crimes - e.g., drugs, guns, property, sexual assaults - that youth are being prosecuted for.)
- ◆ How do youth of different races, ethnicities, and genders, fare as they move through the juvenile justice system? (This data is not reported at all key decision points in the system.)

Moreover, collection of data on race and ethnicity at each decision point in the juvenile justice system is required by the federal Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act. By failing to collect this data, Massachusetts risks losing federal grants which have in the past funded important prevention and intervention programs, including the only current alternative to detention program in the Commonwealth.

THE SOLUTION

By passing Senate Bill No. 940, the Legislature can solve this problem by requiring each agency and department in the juvenile justice system to collect and make public non-identifying statistical data on the race, ethnicity, gender, age, and type of offense charged of youth with whom they come in contact.

TALKING POINTS

- ◆ Without knowing the basic facts about who is being served by our juvenile justice system and what happens to them at each decision point in the system, we can't spot or track trends, develop effective responses, or rationally determine budget priorities.
- ◆ Moreover, without that data we can't evaluate whether programs designed to improve outcomes for youth in contact with the system are working.
- ◆ By not collecting data required by the JJDP, Massachusetts risks the loss of federal grant money that is needed to fund important prevention and intervention programs.
- ◆ Policymakers – and taxpayers – deserve to have the facts. We can't have a fair and effective juvenile justice system without them.
